Carmen Carter DOB: 08/23/53 October 28, 2003

TREATMENT EPISODE OVERVIEW

Ms. Carter was admitted to this agency on March 13, 2003 with a provisional admitting diagnosis of Depressive Disorder – NOS – DSM IV 311. She presented with sleep disturbances, high levels of anxiety, feeling hopeless and helpless and overwhelmed by environmental stressors.

Ms. Carter was evaluated and assessed by Al Rivera, MD on March 18, 2003 and at that time was given trial medications, as follows: Effexor XR 150 mg twice daily; and Serzone 50 mg PO qd At follow up, medications were changed to the following: Effexor XR, 150 mg, one twice daily; Neurotin, 300 mg – one three times daily and Serzone, 150 mg one time daily. Patient has experienced several failed trials of various medications and adjustments were expected. Having shown minimal positive response to the above, on 09/16/03, Serzone was discontinued and Zyprexa, 5 mg PO one HS was prescribed. However, due to concerns that one possible side effect of taking Zyprexa is diabetes, Ms. Carter declined Zyprexa and opted to continue with Serzone. In the interim, patient had blood glucose levels done and those results are not yet available. Ms. Carter reports high blood pressure regulated by Norvasc, high cholesterol levels and she is somewhat overweight, all conditions making her a candidate for diabetes, posing a much higher risk for Zyprexa therapy.

Individual therapy sessions began on March 27, 2003 with Barbara Duhart, LISW. Focus of initial therapy was to stabilize on medications, identify triggers//sources of increased anxiety and feeling overwhelmed and work on skills/coping mechanisms in order to regain and maintain former levels of functioning. Some progress has been made but many obstacles to recovery remain firmly in place.

Another focus of sessions was to build self confidence so that Ms. Carter could return to work. She also needed to move and at first was unable to accomplish this. She did eventually move to a new place but the stress and struggle in accomplishing the move induced exacerbation of the original symptoms and negated any progress to date. Ms. Carter also took a job and was attempting full time work when her father passed away in Chicago. She faced a different type of therapy need after returning home as she had obtained family information hidden for some time. Unresolved early childhood issues were explored. Ms. Carter continued to take medications but reported little, if any relief from depressive symptoms. Her fatigue was just as enduring and intense, there were episodes of binge eating, uncontrollable crying spells, poor memory and inability to concentrate and focus on any given task to completion. Grief, loss and acceptance of the inevitable were incorporated into sessions. Ms. Carter remains depressed and she is beginning to hold little hope of any relief in the near future. Explored options including voc/ed for career changes; part time employment; part time entitlements; there are several avenues open to Ms. Carter should she desire to begin accessing these and other resources. Ms. Carter indicated that she has filed for SSI and disability benefits.

Prognosis for Ms. Carter is guarded, mostly due to lack of positive response to several medications in various combinations. Physical indicators and attributes have been considered and Ms. Carter has been advised to get the regular maintenance physical with blood levels and thyroid check completed. She is still displaying the same set of symptoms as when she was first admitted and the far reaching effects of continuing symptomlogy add heavily to already prominent features of clinical depression.

Depression

person who feels sad all the time, has unexplained crying spells; or loses interest in usual activities may have major depression, a serious medical illness that should be distinguished from normal temporary feelings of sadness after a loss, such as the death of a relative or friend. Major depression affects 14 million persons in the United States each year. The June 18, 2003, issue of JAMA is a theme issue devoted to articles about depression.

Having at least 5 of these symptoms occurring nearly every day for at least 2 weeks:

- Feeling sad or empty
- Decreased interest or pleasure in activities
- Appetite change with weight loss or weight gain
- Decreased or increased sleeping
- Fatigue or loss of energy
- . Feeling worthless or guilty
- Being either agitated or slowed down
- Difficulty thinking or concentrating
- Recurrent thoughts of death or suicide

OTHER TYPES OF DEPRESSION

- Bipolar disorder (previously called manic-depressive disorder)—occurrence of episodes of major depression and episodes of abnormally elevated mood called mania (severe) or hypomania (less severe)
- Dysthymia—mild depression symptoms lasting for at least 2 years
- Postpartum depression—depression occurring after the birth of a baby
- Seasonal affective disorder—major depression occurring regularly in seasons with low sunlight

TREATMENTS FOR DEPRESSION

Medications

Several types of antidepressant medications have been shown to be effective for depression, but they must be taken for several weeks before they begin to work.

Psychotherapy
 Several kinds of "talking therapies" have also been shown to be effective for depression. They involve evaluating and changing the thoughts, attitudes, and relationship problems that are associated with depression.

Bright light
 Daily exposure to bright light can be helpful for seasonal depression.

Daily exposure to bright light can be helpful for seasonal depression.

• Electroconvulsive therapy

A series of treatments involving passage of electric current through the brain while the patient is asleep from an anesthetic medication can often relieve even severe depression. These treatments are usually given about 3 times per week for several weeks.

Anyone who is experiencing symptoms of depression should be evaluated by a doctor. Although individuals with depression often feel that nothing can help them, effective treatments are available. Evaluation and treatment are particularly important to prevent suicide. Suicide usually stems from depression.
